

Glaseco BV Expands Window and Door Installation to Wider Service Area

March 26, 2026

HOOFDDORP, NL - March 26, 2026 -

Glaseco B.V., a Hoofddorp-based window frame and door installation company, has announced an expansion of its service area to cover a 50-kilometer radius around Amsterdam. The move makes the company's full range of custom window frames, doors, sliding systems, and roller shutters accessible to homeowners and commercial property managers across a significantly larger portion of North Holland and surrounding provinces.

The expansion comes at a time when demand for energy-efficient building upgrades continues to grow across the Netherlands. The Dutch government's ISDE subsidy program, which has allocated a budget exceeding 500 million euros for 2026, provides financial incentives for homeowners who install HR++ or triple glazing and other insulation measures. According to the Netherlands Enterprise Agency, which administers the program, eligible homeowners can recover a portion of their investment when working with qualified installation companies.

Glaseco B.V. supplies and installs window systems manufactured in PVC, aluminium, wood, and steel, sourced from Dutch and German manufacturers. The company also installs VELUX roof windows, entrance and garden doors, interior steel doors, adaptive roller shutters, screen blinds, and facade cladding. Each project begins with an on-site consultation where specialists assess the property and recommend configurations based on the building type, energy requirements, and aesthetic preferences of the client.

The wider service area means that property owners in cities and towns within 50 kilometers of Amsterdam now have access to the same consultation and installation services that Glaseco B.V. has provided to clients in the Hoofddorp and Amsterdam areas since the company's founding in 2021. The expansion includes coverage for both residential renovation projects and commercial installations for offices, historic buildings, and multi-unit housing managed by property companies.

The Netherlands has seen a sustained increase in building renovation activity as homeowners respond to rising energy costs and stricter energy performance standards for residential properties. According to the Dutch government's "Whoever isolates, benefits" public awareness campaign, upgrading windows and insulation remains one of the most effective measures for reducing household energy consumption. Older homes with single-pane or outdated double-glazed windows account for a significant share of residential heat loss, making window replacement a priority for property owners seeking to improve their home's energy label rating. The growing demand for qualified installation companies has created longer wait times in many regions, particularly in densely populated areas of the Randstad.

All Glaseco B.V. products meet the technical specifications required under the ISDE subsidy program, according to the Netherlands Enterprise Agency's published insulation measures list. Homeowners who install qualifying window frames and glazing through a professional contractor may apply for the subsidy within 24 months of project completion. The program is designed to lower the financial barrier for building improvements that reduce energy consumption and contribute to national climate objectives.

Glaseco B.V. operates from its headquarters in Hoofddorp and serves both individual homeowners and commercial clients, including property management firms. The company is registered with the Dutch Chamber of Commerce under KVK number 83124616.
